GLAZIERS, GLASS STAINERS AND PAINTERS. The art so much admired and so much in vogue at present, of painting on glass, or more properly glass staining, is nearly as ancient as the material itself. Many examples of such work have been found among the ruins of ancient buildings, resembling a kind of mosaic work, and though exeented in a different manner and by a different rocess, arriving at the same end, and fully prov ng the skill of the workers. The oldest speci mens were composed of panes of glass colored thoroughly in making, and joined together hy lead. The modern method differs considerably from that of the ancients. It consists in the ap plication of colors to the surface of uncolore glass, and then exposing them to heat in a furnuce. This heat causes the colors to strike into the glass and become permanently fixed. This art is now practiced more generally and in more perfection than ever; pictures in stained glass be ing executed with the natural effects of light an shade, an improvement in the art unknown to the

Once only cathedrais and churches were thu adorned, but the art has, of late years, been ap plied to private dwellings in many departments and also to the ornamenting of many utensils for the table and houdoir. Our local glass stainers find a large amount of work to do in their line .-The erection of so many fine private dwellings the many uses about a dwelling to which stained glass is put, the completion at this point of so many superh boats and large public building have given employment to their hands and brough their art into still greater favor. While hein, highly ornamental the art is very useful, and when applied to the front entrances of dwellings present handsome appearance to the passer hy, while i resents a barrier to the intrusion of his Inquisi tive eye. In a city of so much wealth as our own where such splendid residences are continuall being completed, it is not wonderful that the bu iness is so prosperous.

Connected with the art is the less interestin hat equally useful trade of the glazier and painter whose mysteries are well known to all house keepers. Our ornamental as well as house painters are well known for their admirable wor and excellent finish. Not only are they engage in painting and ornamenting houses and steam poats, hut our painters, as a general thing, com bine sign painting with their rougher art.

The business in all its branches is carried or by about 50 persons, who are to be found in every This is a season in which old houses are being repaired, and new ones being finished, and the house painters find sufficient labor to give em ployment to a large and efficient force. Ther are now in the employ of the house and sign Dainters about 200 workmen, to whom are pai an average of $2,000 per week, and whose labor is worth to those employing them about $200,000

We are indebted to Jo. Desha, Esq., Cor responding Secretary, for a complimentary ticket to the next annual Fair of the Harrison county Agricultural and Mechanical Association, which will be held on the grounds of the Association, commencing on Tuesday, Sept. 20th, and terminating Friday, 28d. Accompanying the ticket, we also received the list of preminms of the Association, which is exceedingly liheral, equalling that of any County Fair in the State. The Ilarrison County Fair has always been attractive and sucessful. The attendance is usually very large and brilliant, and the exhibition of fine stock unsur passed. The grounds are well improved, and the amphitheater is one of the largest and most elegant in the State. We have no doubt that the Several of our citizens who started to the parbecne, at Nashville, on Monday afternoon, were nnable to reach their destination, as there was not ample conveyance to Bowling Green from Ritter's. Some of the persons tried to make the connection from Bowling Green by chartering a four-horse wagon, while others remained at Ritter's to pursue their journey to Nashville at their leisure, or go to the Cave, as their inclination directed. The remainder came back to the city o the train yesterday morning.

A RECELESS DRAYMAN - DISTRESSING OCCUR-RENCE.-Ahout one o'clock yesterday evening the wife of Mr. Rodstein, a tailor, was run over on Main street, above Eighth, by a dray driven by Frank Conley. The woman was crossing the street, and the driver was looking back, while his horses were going in a sharp trot. The wheel passed over the woman's abdomen. What renders it peculiarly distressing, she is far gone in pregnancy, and last night physicians entertained the belief that the child was killed, and the mother in a critical situation. Conley jumped off his dray and run off. Chief Ray found him in bed at his house shortly afterwards, badly scared.

The death of Robert Wickliffe will render necssary the return of Col. Preston, now at the Court of Madrid. The estate of Mr. Wickliffe is normous, and Mrs. Preston, the wife of our Minister, is one of tho three heirs who inherit the whole. The share of Mrs. Preston, added to the present fortune of her husbaud, will make Col. reston one of the richest men of the age.

We regret the necessity which will bring hor Col. Preston. He is one of the most efficient, faithful and popular Ministers ever sent ahroad from this country. It is to such men that our ountry owes the enviable position she eccupies in the Courts of Europe. Colonel Preston, however, will return to those who love him and who have been pleased to honor him in daya past. He twice went to Congress from this district hy glorious majorities, and when he received the appointment of minister to Spain he was more prominently spoken of than any other man in thia State for the office of Governor. He has heretofore been spoken of as an aspirant for the United States Senate, and upon his return home his friends will possibly place him on the list of the candidates for that high office.

ADDRESS OF H. F. SIMRALL, ESQ., the Opening of the Seventh Annual Exhibition of the Kentucky Mechanics' Institute, Tuesday, September 6th, 1859.

Ladies and Gentlemen : This exhibition may h taken as a fair typical expression of our civilization. In walking along these aisles and avenues and pausing before the various objects that meet the eye, it will be noted that the solid and prac-tical predominate over the fanciful—the useful over the imaginative. Indeed, so emphatically is this the observation, that it has gone into an aphorism that we are a utilitarian people—that those arts and handicrafts which minister to the me necessities are cultivated, whilst those which take their root in the imagination and hody forth the grand and beautiful in architecture, sculpture, painting and landscape horticulture, are neglected.

I propose to examine very cursorily the semi nal principles or elements of our civilization, and nat principles of elements of our civilization, and are now being made, in their development.

These are very much directed and influenced by climate, soil, minerals, topography, government, &c. If we go back to the colonization of our portion of the contineut, we will find the early settlers earnest, rohust, thoughtful. That for the most part they left the old continent not to engage in the exciting sports and adventures incident to the new, but to build for themselves homes in these solitudes—to set up here, as far as circum-stances would allow, the school, the court and the church—to plant organized communities—exclud-ing those evils of which they complained as op-pressions in the old world, and giving free scope to the exercise of individual conscience, judg-ment and action. Far to the West of them stretch-ed out a country of primeval forest, of whose ex-tent they had no adequate and delined knowledge, and over it all there roamed those nomadic tribe who watched with jealousy the encrouchments of these straugers on their ancient hunting grounds. This external enemy kept the tide of population and settlement in a great degree compact and or-derly, and repressed their dispersion over the continent, and lapsed into a state of semi-bur-barism. And so it has continued as the wave of population has rolled westward and possessed new countries. These went along with themthe religion, the law, the achool—the artisau trades of the older—and these Indian tribes, which repressed the wandering of the early calonists in the East, are still receding to the West, and hang upon the outskirts of the settlements. It is no part of my purpose to night to deal with the facts of our early history to show that our institutions of government and law have grown out of them by a logical necessity. History is of little value, except as we deal with it philosophically, except as we gather from it those motives and principles which stir and ani-mate great communities, which express and manfest then selves in action, and make erus and pochs in the progress of the race.

Looking to the fact (not for national glorifica ion) of the amazing accomplishment of this ountry since the peace of independence, and the nind is so weighted down and dazzled at the magnitude of the result, that it seems difficult to fix attention upon the causes and motive forces ade-juste to have brought it about. I am persuaded hat we have here to night some, and the most po

This nation was planted upon a new and fresh continent. Its inlancy was surrounded with danger and peril. It must of necessity be staldanger and peril. It must of necessity be stationart, robust, and hrave, or perish. Its mission was to occupy the country. The forest must be converted into field; the mountains must be scaled; rivers and lakes must be crossed and usvigated. Man, individual man, was brought into direct and immediate contact with Nature; he communed with her in all her primal grandeur and beauty. How much was to be done, and how ew hands to do 1:9 and if these new scenes are to hecome like England, Holland, and France, how many long centuries must elapse before manual labor alone can accomplish it? There is a neces sity, therefore—and, it is true, that necessity is the mother of invention—there is a necessity that Nature and her laws shall be carefully observed and studied; that those subtle agencies and forces which she employs in her grand labratory shall ne brought to light; that they shall be applied and harnessed to some devised contrivances, by which they shall he made obvident to the will and reason of man, and, under the guidance of that will and reason, like mighty giants, made to do

When a man goes to make his home in one of eld, provides his animals and implements for hu handry, then his seed time and harvest. road, the school-house, the church, the market where to sell his surplus and huy to supply his wants, are his next care. Now comes the necessity for the workshop, and the store, and the town. But the store must be supplied from the forge, the just get their crude materials from the f s a country of magnificent distances; the eld new be ten thousand miles from the factory the forests may loom the sides of far interior hills and mountains, the coals and the ores be imbeded at their base. Unless these can all be brought to at their base. Onless to be spun and woven into cloth, to be wrought into furniture, and carts, and wagons, of what avail are they to our Western migrant or any one else?

The Indian floated in his bark canoe upon the waters of the Hudson, the Ohio and the Missisippi, long, long before the white man intruded the these waters the mero pretentions, broadorn and keelhoat. But, oh, the toil, the labor, horn and keelhoat. But, oh, the toil, the labor, the tediousness of pushing and pulling, with hooks and poles, the keelboat against the rapid current of the Mississippi. To have made one such voyage in a man's lifetime, from New Orleans to Louisville, was an event, an adventure of great pith and moment. And, then, after all, what a heggarly account of cotton hales and augar hogsbeads did she discharge. From Philadelphia and Baltimore it wasn't much hetter.—
There was the lazily, the slow moving wagon, There was the lazily, the slow moving wagon two miles an hour, up and down the mountains to Pittshurg or Wheeling, and then the flat or keeloata down the Ohio. It is not strange that our fathers, hereabouts, n those days, were clad in deer skins, in home raised and home made woolen linsey and flax ireu; that our mothers reserved their calico gowns for Sunday meetings, and weddings, and other gay occasions; and that coffee and tea, rare luxuries, were wested to home pathic spoonfulls of the sacharine.

But our emigrant, in two or three years, has full, his granaries are plethoric. He has enough, and to spare, and so have his neighbors around him. But what can he do with the surplus? He is twenty, fifty or a hundred sules from a market; too far to haul. Unless some means can be devised to get him to market he must limit his productions to his immediate wants; he must convert his own wool and flax into clothing, and es-chew tea, coffee and sugar altogether; he has no money with which to huy. The schoolmaster can't he abroad, for the luborer is worthy of his bire, and he is not so disinterested at to make an even exchange of food for the mind for what will just suffice for food for the hody. The children will grow up idle, ignorant and vicious. What was wheat worth thirty years ago in Lexington? What were hogs in Mercer and Shelby? What are they worth now and for several years past? Answer me that, and your answer will suggest tha which exactly reliaves the exigences of our emi-grant farmer—a railroad or caual.

What matters it to him if he does pay ton, fifteen or twenty cents a hushel for the transporta-tion of his grain, and the like proportion for his live stock and other produce? His land cost him hut two or five dollars an acre; be cultivates a virgin and a generous soil, he la yet for awhile far away from the expensive amusements and plea sures of fashionable lile. His profits now are only limited by his ability to produce. Give him the improved cultivator, the seed sower, the reaper

He now betbinks him that the old log cabin is not good enough for him; so be pulls it down and huilds a house with the modern improvements.— He is in the market for fine furniture, for Brussels carpets, ironized mantles and the piano. His wife and his daughiers have actually persuaded him that he can afford a carriage. He has become a customer, you see, of several of the important interests represented here to night.

But in this ideal representative personage, yet a true and a real one, what is that which is at the bottom of all his good, and which at last is the lever and power of the whole country. It is that idea which first fitted about in the brain of Fulton, assuming to his mind's eye an sirv form and shape. It is that idea materialized into a thing almost of life. It is the steam engine. It is a thing so common, so omnipresent, of such universal nee, that we cannot fully appreciate its wonderful power and agency in opening up the wealth and resources of the country, and in pushing forward the general civilization.

It moves every cylinder, wheel and jet of water which converts the filthy rags of the street and closet into the paper upon which we write.

It prints the hooks and papers which we read;

It puts to work the spindles and looms that make the shility to maintain it. We commend his article to the attentive perusal of our readers.

It may not be amiss to state that up to the time of the appearance of the squatter soverelgnty article in Harper, the writer of the communication in the state of the squatter of the communication in the state of the squatter soverelgnty article in Harper, the writer of the communication in the state of the squatter of the communication in the state of the squatter of the communication in the state of the squatter of the communication in the state of the squatter of the squatte question was a devoted friend to Donglas. more safety than the winds of heaven. Upon our rivers it has tied up the keel-hoat to rot at the bank. It does not confine itself as a propeling power to the waters, but has constructed for itself an iron track, until the whole country, for eacher to circumference, is being brought into close neighborhood. Now mark some of the advantages of which that.

The largest of community are pertubage. The fact that the state of community are pertubage. The fact that the state of community are pertubage.

all classes of community are partakers: The farmer, hundreds of miles from the center of trade, who has no market in his country town, learns who has no market in his country town, learns by telegraph in the morning paper, that grain and hemp and tohacco are up at Louisville. The next day's train brings up the hars, the bales and hogsheads, and these go back again in part, at least, in labrics of the city manufacture. Markets are multipled, prices are equalized. We, here in the interior, can dine upon the fresh oyster of the Chesapeake, the salmon of the lakes, and the grouse of the prairing. Next winter we will have the orange, the ies. Next winter we will have the orange, the bino apple, the bannana, just plucked from the ree. Cau I not sum it all up in a word when I say that the thoughts and ideas, the fruits and theirs and records of all quarters with the sand records. abics, and people of all quarters, will be more senerally diffused and intermingled, and that nowing each other better they will the more and inowing each other better they will the more and betterlove one another?

Ilow pleasant to he spirited away from the rosts and snows of the North, where winter holds all unture locked in his ribs of ice, and to be set down in the land of the sun, tho land of the nivrtle and the vine, or to he lifted up from the nivrtle and this vine, or to he lifted up from the land of the south and this vine plains of the South and he scorched and thirsty plains of the South, and laced upon the cool hills and by the refreshing kes of the North.

Our Western farmer has now grown children Our Western farmer has now grown children. The younger ones having better schools and advantages, have read in books and papers of the world's movements and progress. Their tastes, too, have been refined, and they propose to the old man to go traveling to see the world. They risit the cities, perchance, they see such an exhi-ion as this. They long to adorn the rural man-tion, to hang its walls with pictures, and adorn ts mantles and center tables with specimens of oso, its lawns with roses and statuary, and go home laden with these spoils of the fine And thus you have the germs and hudngs of a taste for them following after the train f the practical and useful.

A member of the British Parliament was re-ntly traveling over the States north of th Ohio, observing their system of agriculture. He was not able at a distance, to understand how ommunities so new could cultivate so large readth of land, and send to the East and t urope, such enormous quantities of grain. I is published letters he states the solution of the problem to be the general application of ma-hinery to agricultural purposes. In Ohio alone to estimates that machinery does the work of uthwest, and you will see on the shores of the ulf, communities that have not been one whit chind the States of the West-in agriculture nquestionably the most wealth producing. Now, tlemen, the cotton and sugar of those region e the produce of the soil. Yet, I affirm that echanics have made them what they are—the eading articles in the commerce of the world You have all seen spiece of wood so full of cuckle burs that every fibre seemed made fast of a bur as its natural seed. And probably some of you in the olden time nay have undertaken to pick the burs from the I suppose to clean one fleece of three unds is a good days work, to saynothing of the icking of the fingers. In every hundred weight cotton, as gathered in the fields, about sixty x nounds of the weight is seed; to make on in the plants. To the seed scattered thick hrough the pod, every separate fibre is attached and fastened by a gluey oil; to separate the seed hese fibres must be broken at the point of juncion.

I think that I do not exaggerate when I say hat if every agricultural laborer in the United States were put to the task of separating the seed rom the lint by manual labor, there would not be igers enough to do the work.

Sixty-six years ago a party of gentlemen in the arlor of Mis. Green, widow of the celebrated den. Green, were discussing the state of agriculure in Georgia; it was remarked by one of them hat it would be impossible to raise cotton for the market unless something could be designed to school teacher heard the discussions. He h been employing he leisure in studying the law of mechanics, and his skill in constructing speci nens. He hethought him that he would apply these Georgia planters what they so much eeded. At this time indigo, the fithiest and mos anters the cotton gin, and with eight mules, or ire prepared for the spindle. Belove the intro-luction of Writney's great but simple invention osting about two hundred and lifty dollars perfected, there was not cotton, enoug rown to do our own people. Now we supply Ecoppe and part of Asia, Now we freightore sea going vessels with it that ll other American products put togeth-r. Ilow richly does cotton repay the mu-hanic arts and trades for the priceless hoon received from them. It is wondrous to think how many wheels of toil that interest sets in motion. The pines of Maine, the iron of Pennsylvanis, he hemp of kentucky, all contribute to build he vessels to do her earning—for "There's not a ship that solis the occan, Must bring it ribute, every soil, Must bring it ribute, great and smail, And help to build the wooden wail."

Manchester and Lowell have grown populous nd rich by spinning and weaving. Kentucky omes in tor a large share of her blessings. To that market go the mules, the swine, the plow he iron, the engine, the wagon, and carts, of this tate's growth and produce.

Time would fail me in the enumeration. Yet, enllemen, this item of cotton, that clothes rich and poor-so entwined into the great commercia terests of the world, is debtor for its extension nd development to Whitney's genius.

If I could pause to do so, I could show that the ulture of the sugar cane is under obligations al isiana employs in its producting, steam engines and other apparatus, costing not less than five inillions six hundred thousand dollars. I cannot pretermit the last great achievemen of mechanical genius. The gentler sex has always so heguiled and softened the toils of la bor and genius, that it was but due that some fit ting offering should be laid at the feet of hearty Well, we have the sewing machine. How it ha mancipated the fingers of the ladies from the lrudgery of the needle. It would be a curious calculation to sum up the hours and days and months of average female life, occupied in plying the needle-rents will be made, seams rip, bu tons break off, clothes wear out. To go all around one of those modern extended skirts with stitch after stitch, is really tatigueing to think of. It is like setting out on a long coursey afoot. Now a lady may buy the material, and with the artificial sewer slitch up a robe in time to make her morning calls. In two or three days she can fit out a summer's wardrobe for a house full of little responsibilities. How much more time, now, for poetry, and the last novel, for mu-sic, painting, and the culture of flowers, for the gaieties and pleasures of social life, and, to the or, what an angel of mercy will it prove. How or them it will save time for other duties, and ncrease the opportunities for relaxation and en-oyment. How it will enlarge the sphere of their knowledge and culture. Hood's song of the shirt will soon he antiquated. We have just begun to ee the great things this little machine will bring shout. Wait a little longer; wait until the have run ont; wait until they can be had for the cost of making them-for twenty or twenty hve dollars; wait until the poor can buy them, and hen you will witness their triumph and blessed

It results from what I have said. What part, and how, the mechanic arts and trades have con-tributed to open up the wealth and power of the country. It has appeared that the soil, the mine, the shop, and the factory, hy acting and reacting upon each other, have produced the national wealth, and given tone and direction to our civil zation.

In this career of progress and improvement, where do you place the merchant? Certainly not among those classes that produce and create national wealth—or, if at all, to a very subordinate degree. His office, a very necessary and important one, in the economy of husiness and commerce, is that of broker and factor—to operate between the producers and consumers—to collect between the producers and consumers—to collect commodities already grown or made, and distrib te them out to those who use and consume them. The merchant may have a million of goods on his shelves and in his warehouse, yet of all he has not made so much as one yard of calico or one spool of thread.

The mechanic, arts and trades, each dependant very much on the other, set themselves in favor-ed towns, where materials suitable for their ope-rations are convenient, coals for fuel and generaing steam cheap, and in constant supply, is a matter of leading necessity, and then quick and reliable communication with consumers.

The tendency of the railroad system, now ap

The tendency of the railroad system, now ap extensive and still more to he extended, is to gather in from the field, the mine and the forest their raw products, and work them in elligibly located cities into such fabrics and machines as men need. It is a fact of common observation, that the villages through which these roads pass dwindle, and the thin husiness and customes go to the cities. There is another fact, attested by observation and history. That great cities cannot be huilt up beyond the ething and flowing of the tide, beyond the reach and access of sea-going vessels, except by the manufacturing and mechanical interests. At the seaboard ports, the great national surplus is collected for exportation; there national surplus is collected for exportation; there the international exchanges are made. But I do not stay to expand on this.

Mr. President, have you ever made a sober estimate of the falls of the Ohio as the point of superior advantages for manufacturing? It is the second point on the continent for packing meats—the largest hagging and rope and tohacco market of the West. These things, with dry goods and groceries, would make a place of very important and considerate trade. But they never can make a great and populous city. Twenty or thirty em-ployees suffice to do the husiness of a dry goods house selling a million of goods. So of the gro-cery, and so of the commission house. Do the warehouses want over one hundred men to hardle and sell the million and half dollars worth of tohacco that they receive? But these special commodities of the market attract a very arge number of havers and producers, who would naturally he inclined to make here their pur-chases of manufactured goods; for, other things heing equal, the selling market will always supply tuose who send their produce for sale. A fac-tory, or mechanical trades, turning out a half million of dollars worth of wares her annum, will upply and support, directly and indirectly, four or tive hundred souls. These become occupants is houses, consumers of dry goods and farm produce; and just as these establishments are multilied, so is the area of the city extended and popmanufacturing point, not a rival or competitor.— The population of that rich delta, reaching over three or four States, must receive from abroad ron, nails, wooden ware, machinery, and, for the nosi part, farm implements, and cotton and wool-n cloths. The demand for these articles will in-reuse in the ratio of the growth and increase of oso States. GOING TO A BARBECUE -His Honor, Mayor Crawford, several members of the City Council and other officials, to the number of twenty-five accepted the invitation to attend the grand railroad harhecue at Nashville. They started on Monday evening, and got as far as Ritter's, the present terminus of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad. There they discovered that there were thirty miles of staging to Bowling Green, and no ecommodations, except for through passengers, who had paid cash for tickets at the stage office in

It is true, there were two stages and horses, but the stage agent resolutely refused to permit their ise, saying he had no authority, and that it would nterfere with the business of the company .-Neither coaxing, reason, nor threats moved the obstinate agent, and the barbecued individuals grinned and bore it as best they could. Some of them finally employed a common wagon, and nine of them, including his Honor, the Mayor, started at ten o'clock to try and make the connection. A few remained over till the next morning, but the balance, like sensible fellows, returned home, disgusted with their trip.

Unquestionably there was mismanagement on the part of somebody, and a lack of accommodation by the stage company's agent. It ought to provide facilities for passengers, and not permit them to remain over a day, and subject them to such inconvenience. We are told that even Mayor Crawford, who is remarkable for his equanimity of temper, got mad. We reckon he was never angry before in his life.

The crowd in attendance was large, and we have rarely seen more beauty and gaiety than enlivened that hall last night. The building is handsomely decorated, and there is nuite a display of the handiwork of artisans, mechanies, &c., as much, perhaps, in quantity, as we usually see on the opening night, but more select and an improvement in quality. A band of fine music contributed to the pleasure of the evening. The address, which we publish elsewhere, was de ivered by H. F. Simrall, Esq., who was introduced by Geo. W. Morris, Esq., one of the Directors. The address was read by Mr. Simrall, and listened to with profound attention. It will be seen that it is a very fine effort; broad, comprehensive and practical in its views, and vet with enough imagery to please, and not destroy its force and ef-

Etilors of the Courier:—Permit a Southern Democrat who arrogates to himself no position of importance or notoriety in the Democratic party, and who yet claims to feel as deep and vital an interest in the welfare and prosperity of his conntry as the lolliest intellect in the land, to express through your columns some of those thoughts brough your columns some of those thoughts which he helieves he entertains in common with housands of his countrymen as humble and as nknown as himself, and which are naturally aroused by the article recently published in Har-per's Magazine, purporting to emanate from the pen of the Hon. Stephen A. Douglas. Under all the circumstances of Mr. Douglas' present position and past history, the appearance of that arti-cle was well calculated to excite profound aston-ishment. The motives which may have prompted it are, perhaps, in a country where the largest liberty of personal opinion is conceded, not prop-erly the subject of conjecture or speculation. It is incumbent upon us to take the fact as we find it. Respect for Mr. Douglas, and the importance of the question therein discussed, alike demand for it a culm and attentive consideration at the bands

f Southern Democrats. The eviden: deliherar distinguished author by which he was and is pre-pared to stand or fall in the judgment of the na-Its sentiments were not u ered in the hot nost self-poised intellect might be momentarily ostled from its center, but after months of tran-uil and undisturbed reflection had enabled him to mature and concentrate his argument. It appeared, too, immediately after the elections in Kentucky and Tennessees, which, after contests of acrimony and bitterness unprecedented in the history of those States, the Democratic party had carried by overwhelming mejorities. It would have been impossible, in a canvass marked by such able and searching discussion, for the Dem cratic party to have concealed its sentiments ongress over the institution of slavery in the Territories, or the power of the Territorial Legis ature to interfere with it. The party sought not to do so, its candidates from the hustings and the party itself at the notis emphatically expressed the opinion that the whole controversy was upon abstractions, but with no less emphasis they anounced that, it, in despite of their dearly cherished opes and belief, a contingency should arise in thich it would be manifest that the Constitution, the laws and the judgments of the properly con-stituted Courts failed to protect them in those rights which they believed were secured to them the compact made at the birth of the Republi by their fathers-among which was the protection of slave property in the Territories, they were prepared to demand of Congress such legislation as would protect it—they helieving Con-gress was invested with power to legislate for its protection, and that if this just demand was re-fused they would be prepared to assert their rights in such manner as a brave and free people should do, however direful and deadly might he the conflict, appealing to God and the world as witnesses of the justice of their cause. The calmnvestigation of so exciting a question by a race oted for their sensitiveness under any aggression, ancied or real upon their rights, mark it as without parallel in the political history of this country, n all of it the distinguished Senator from Illinois, Ithough helieved to be in error, was treated by them with generous leniency. He had won for hiuself a high fame and a great name in the Democratic party, the greatness of his intellect, the dauntless courage of his course, the fearlessess with which he announced his opinions, chal-enged and received the admiration of his South-rn hrethren, who differed with him in opinion, hey fondly cherished the hope that the line which livided him from them would, with the lapse of inic, he obliterated and forgotten. It would have eeined that some forbearance and some difference was due from Mr. Douglas to friends so devoted to countrymen so conservative. Yet, startling as the fact may be, and is within one month of the time when the Democratic party in those States and thus rendered their solemn verdict on this uestiou, Mr. Douglas, in defiance and contempt t their expressed desire that the discussion of his question should cease, publishes in a periodical, having the most extensive circulation ever gained by the presson this continent, read by mil-lions in Southern homes and around Southern tireublishes them, too, without apparent cause or st hopes for promotion and honor at the hands f his countrymen, while the Democratic party cannot admit that the success or failure of any ember of it can affect its permanence or integrity. It is yet willing, so far as Senator Douglas ture is concerned, to accept the issue and try he conclusion with him

It is not to be denied that the essay of Mr. Douglas evinces ingenuity and plausihility, but like many other plausible theories, it rests upon an unsound hypothes's. Mr. Douglas maintains that, because the compromise and agreement known as the Kunsus-Nehraska act does not designate as the time when legislation may be exercised by the people of the Territories upon the subject of slavery, the period when the State overnment is formed, that therefore the power s conceded to the Territorial Legislature, or, at heet, not denied and not forbidden. Mr. Douglas has presided with great ability upon the bench of a sister State; he knows full well that not only nany a written instrument he explained by rol, but, that in construing it, all the cumstances connected with the comp the representations, the intent and meaning of the contracting parties are to be considered, and that deceit, fraud or misrepre-centation will annul and vittate it. The history f the discussions connected with the passage that act is now embalmed in the archives of the nation and in the memory of the people, and it is otorious that the South agreed to it under the impression and conviction that the period when the State governments were formed and became operative was the initial moment when adverse egislation might be exercised by the people of hese communities. It is in vain to say that the couthern States allowed themselves to be hoodvinked and deceived. Such a plea would be scout ed in a court of ordinary equitable jurisdiction; with how much less force can it be uiged at the har of the nation when the dearest earthly rights of almost half the confederacy are at atake? But were the Southern States deceved, did they construe the Kansas Nebraska act in a different manor Douglas himself construed it, expounded and

Upon a resolution of Senator Hale to insert an ions for the legislative, executive and judicial xpenses of the Government for the year une 30th, 1850, Mr. Douglas said: "I he no such thing as sovereign power attaches to a ferritory while a Territory. I hold that a Terri-ory derives whatever power it possesses from the titution, under the organic act, and no more. I hold that all the power a Territorial Legisla-ture possesses is derived from the Constitution and its amendments ander the act of Congress, and because I hold that I denied last that the people of a Territory, without the con-sent of Congress, could assemble at Lecompton and create an organic law for the people; I denied the validity of your Lecompton Constitution, for the reason that constitutions can only be made by sovereign power, and because the Territory was not a sovereignty." See Congressional Globe, second session of Thirty-fifth Congress, part sec-

Senator Douglas then said in the same address to the Senate: "The intent was to give to the Territorial Legislature all the power that we pos-Was not this a delegation by Congress of power which the Constitution vested in Con-

Mr. Donglas savs "Congress cannot delegate to a Territorial Legislature, or to any other body of men whatsoever, any power which the Constitution has rested in Congress;" yet Congress does delegate to the Territorial Legislature the power to pass certain laws, to levy taxes for the support of the local government, &c., just as in the State of Kentucky or Illinois. The theory of the State Constitutions is that the law-making power and the authority for taxation resides in the State Legislatures elected by the people of the entire State, yet those State Legislatures delegate power to innumerable municipal corporations for cities, owns and villages, which levy and collect taxes. pass laws restraining the liberty of the citizen, and by enactments and ordinances add to the tegislative laws of the State. Mr. Douglas may say this is really the action of the State Legisla-lature through her agent created by herself, the municipal corporation. True, and so we contend is the legislation of the Territorial Assembly the act of the agent of its principal, Congress. But admit, for the sake of argument, that Congress only institutes or forms the Territorial Government, not as a principal appointing an agent, but as an agent herself of the people of the several States investing the Territorial Legislature with sons were on the lookout on that equare for his ghostship, but he didn't appear. It is said (by those who believe in ghoats) that this one bears the semblance of a man, hut is robed in pure to protect it, and we arrive at the same point as before.

The solution of these difficulties Mr. Douglas thinks he attains by assuming that "the people of the Territories and Colonies are to be regarded the Territories and Colonies are to ne regard as political communities, which were entitled to a free and exclusive power of legislation in their provincial legislatures, where their representation could alone be preserved in all cases of taxation and internal polity. This right pertains to the people, collectively, as a law and orderabilding community." "Whether the number shall he fixed at ten, fifteen or twenty thousand inhabitants, does not affect the principle."

Now, as we have seen in the history of the Colonies, this claim of innate sovereignty in the Territory or Colony, conflicting with the sovereignty of the General Covernment, must, if carried out to its legitimate sequences, end in rebellion and to a sequence of the colonies of nine o'dlock the drop fell. His neck man the prison. After he had been suspended dissolves into this are not at all disis noticeable that the boulders are not at all disturbed, but being a ghost, of course he can 'gethrough a very small hole. This seems very absurd to sensible persons, and to curselves who haven't faith in these kind of spirits, but certainly residents of that neighborhood give cro-

pact known as the Constitution. If sovereignty innate and perfect resides in her people they are independent of the world, and may cut themselves adrift from all connection with the Federal Government; they alone have the right through their properly elected representatives in tax themselves, and when any other power attempts to tax them it is an infringement of their sovereign power. Yet the Congress of the United States levies an impost or daty, which is a tax upon every pound of coffee or tea used by the people of the Territory, in the levying of which tax the people have no voice, either hy themselves or representatives. If the people of the Territories in their Legislatures are sovereign, this is an infringement of their tures are sovereign, this is an infringement of their sovereignty, and they have a right to resist, for, mark you, they never have as yet agreed, by joining the confederacy, to delegate certain of their powers to the Federal Government, and thus restrict their natural soversign right. Mr. Douglas says, "If the proposition he true that the Consti-tution establishes slavery in the Territories be-yond the power of the people legally to control it, why does it not exist in Pennsyl-vania hy reason of the Constitution?" We answer because Pennsylvania was a sovereign State at the formation of the Confederacy; no partition of her soil was held by the General Gov-ernment in trust for the people of the other States ernment in trust for the people of the other States in common with her own. She did not then part with this attribute of sovereignty in favor of the General Government, the sovereignty and inde pendence being perfect and entire, except so far as she has limited it by concession to the General Government. She may lawfully, within her own limits, exclude alavery, just as Kansas, when by the consent of the different States of the Con-federacy expressed through their representarives and senators in Congress she becomes a State and puts on the mantle of full and complete sov ereignty, may abolish slavery within her borders. Congress certainly did not regard the people of the Territories es sovereign within themselves, when they provided section sixth of the bill for the formutinn of a Territorial government for Utah, that 'all laws passed by the Legislative Assembly and Governor shall be submitted to the Congress of the United States, and if disap-proved shall be null and void." Approved Sepember 9th, 1850, 9 stat. 453, and for the Territory of Washington, approved March 2d, 1853, 10 staintes 172; and for Oregon Territory, approved 14th August, 1848, 9 stat. 323; and for Minnesota, approved March 3d, 1849, 9 stat. 403.

Senator Douglas fancies he has an analogy between the resistance of the people of

tween the resistance of the people of the Territories to the introduction of slavery into the Territory, and the resistance and remonstance of the colonies to the introduction of Africans under the imperial laws of Great Britain. Were the analogy perfect, the argument of the Sanaior would end in revolution. I shall not do him the injustice to suppose he is prepared for this deduction. But is the analogy perfect? To he so, the title hy which the Crown of Great Britain held the Continent of North America should and must be identical with the title by which the Federal Government of the United States holds the public domain, known as tween the resistance of the people of the Territor inited States holds the public domain, known as he Territories. Are they identical? The British Crown held the American Continent by the vague title of discovery, or if by any other, by the title in might in contradistinction to right. The people of the colonies held the continent first by the title equired hy their blood, by the sacrifice of the ives of their brethren, their sons and their kindred. That title descended from father to son nntil at the Declaration of Inde-pendence the bones of six generations of occupants and owners lay monldering in the soil; monuments of a title by occupancy of full two centuries. At the date of the cession of the public domain to the Federal Government, the alidity of the title in the States was recognized by the Federal Government—was accepted by it—anbject to all the restraints and restrictions which the State making the cession chose to put upon it; the chief and principal of which restrictions was, that it should be held for the benefit of all the States, and, of course, the in-habitants thereof. In adductor to this the Federal habitants thereof. In addition to this, the Federal Government purchased the Indian title, purchased the title of France, of Spain, of Mexico, with funds raised by taxation of the Northern farmer, alike with the Southern planter, and was bound and is hound, as we think, not only by the amments of the Constitution and deadle again. ompacts of the Constitution and deeds of cession but by every principle of honor, justice and equi-ty known among men, to hold the Territory in trust for the benefit of all the citizens of all the States, permitting them not only to settle on, but selling them the fee-simple, with the ex-press understanding that they may carry there which they shall be protected by the festering care of the General Government—the Federal representation of North, South, East and Westowerinl Commonwealths and weak ones, until such time as the State Covernment, clothing the people of the Territory with the mantle of full and unrestrained sovereignty, supercessupplants the conjoint sovereignty of States, as represented by the Federal

WEDNESDAY, .. SEPTEMBER 7, 1659. Reading Matter on Every Page.

Napoleon III. The European war is over, peace has been con oluded, and the Imperial army has returned in triumph to Psris. The war was brief, but brilliant and decisive, and has added greatly to the reputation of Louis Napoleon; and, hewever he may have heretofore been regarded, there can cow be hut one opinion as to his ability and great.

We have never been a blind admirer of Louis Napoleon; but certainly his career, since he as- own fashion. sumed Imperial authority in France, cannot fail to demand at least an acknowledgment of his profourd sagacity and statesmanship, and as evi dencing his complete knowledge of the character and wants of the French people. However much the friends of Republican institutions may have condemned his want of good faith in hecoming Emperor, still, all things considered, it was undoubtedly the best thing that could have hap.

At no former period has France occupied a higher position, at home and abroad, then at this time. The French people are tranquil and contented, and enjoying a high degree of internal prosperity. Napoleon seems to be acting on the principle that the only way in which he can render his power secure and permanent is by adding to the happiness and consulting the wants of his subjects. He seems to be equal to all emergencies, and whether on the field of battle or in his cabinet, he displays ebnal asgacity and judgment. In the development of the internal greatness and prosperity of France, Napoleon has shown his wisdom; but it was reserved for him to achieve, in the war with Italy a more brilliant and not less enduring re nown. On the same battle-fields the great Napole. on had won imperishable glory, and now with him Napoleon the Third had to measure his battles and his victories. The world looked on to see the evidences of his weakness and his incapacity; but he successfully passed the ordeal. On the same fields he has almost eclipsed the glory of former victories, and his generalship, his humsnity, and his greatness, all shine out only the brighter from a comparison between him and the clder Napo-

Many condemned Louis Napoleon for entering into the Italian war, and attributed to him no higher motives than his own aggrandizement It was openly proclaimed that he would wrest Italy from Austria merely to become himself her master. So far, Napoleon has shown the sincerity of his devotien to Italian freedom. He has gone there with his army; he has fought the battles and gained the victory for Italy, and having done so-having dictated terms of peace to Austris - having achieved freedom for Italy and the Italians, he withdraws his army to Paris.

The recent news from Italy shows that Napoleon has not forced the obnoxious Dukes upon the people, but has left them free to select their own rulers, and in the exercise of their power the assemblies of Tuscauy and Modena have adopted resolutions banishing the dynasties of the former Dukes and annexing the Dukedoms to Piedmont. We have no doubt this appexation has been consummated by the advice of Napo leon, and is another evidence of the sincerity of his efforts in behalf of Italian liberty. Although Napoleon has not done everything for Italy that might have been desired, we have no doubt that he has done all that could be done under the circumstances. Let us not condemn him for what he has left undone, but rather praise what he has done. His labors for Italy have certainly been disinterested and patriotic, and as such are deserving the warmest admiration. He has disappointed his enemies by his good faith and moderation, and whilst he has added greatly to the glory of France, he has not sullied that glory by betraying and enslaving the people, whom he sought to emancipate.

That our readers may know how this colonelling is done, we subjoin the document which came to us vesterday with the great seal of Kentucky apon it. Of course we shall expect all who read this document, and all who get at its contents by hear-say, to understand the distinction between near-say, to understand the distinction between ourself and ordinary individuals hereafter, and to address us in a proper way when they meet ries his six harroled revolving musket, and loads Otherwise we may have to call into requisiion our military prowess before devoting its first ruits to the gallant Governor of Kentneky.

In the name and by the authority of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, Berish Magoffin, Gov-ernor of said Commonwealth, to all who shall see these presents, greeting: Know re, that reposing especial trust and confidence in the integrity, atriotism and ability of R. T. DURBETT, Esq., I o herehy appoint him aid to the Governor with he rank of Colonel, hereby investing him with ull power and authority to execute and fulfil the duties of the said office according to law: and to have and to hold the same with all the rights and emoluments thereunto legally appertaining. In testimony whereof I have caused these letters to be made patent and the seal of the Commonwealth to be hereunto affixed. Done at Frankfort the 5th day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty nine, and in the sixty-eighth year of the Commonwealth.

B. MAGOFFIN. Forney's Attacks on Mr. Holt. [Correspondence of the Baltimora Republican.]

WASHINGTON, Angust 29. I see that Forney, instigated by Wescott, the disgraced ex-Postmaster of Philadelphia, and his desire to bring into disrepute all who are in any way connected with Mr. Buchanan's administration, continues his villainous assaults upon Mr. Holt and the Post Office Department. I have taken the trouble to examine into all Forney's state-ments relative to the postal affairs of the country, and find that they are false from beginning to end wilfully, maliciously false, known to be so by the editor when he manufactured them for his bogns Washington letter. With all due respect for his predecessors, allow me to say, a purer man than Joseph Holt never filled the office of Post Master General. During the brief period he has held that important post numerous evils, which during many years have crept into the Department, have heen corrected, nunecessary expenses cut off, delinquents made to perform their duty, and aubordinates of every grade given to understand that they will be held to a strict accountability. He has the ability, the industry, honesty and nerve to make a model Post Master General, and his report to Congress will, no doubt, show and recommend many salutary reforms, and how millions of the strength of th dollars have and can yet be saved without in to public interest. All afr. Holt's acts thus far have been with an eye single to the public good, He asks nothing of others that he is not willing to do himself. He takes nothing from his office hours, but makes more time than any clerk in his department, early and late being constantly at his post, which enables him, even at this early day in his official life, to understand every case that comes before him in its minuteat details, and decide upon its merits with all the correctness of an experienced officer. In private life this gentleman is above reproach, he is a pattern to all public men. who desire to be as good as they are great. Such is the man who John W. Forney, who has proven himself false to duty, honor, his friends and his party, is endeavoring to drag down to his own

LETTER FROM FRANKFORT

After the Ball-Frankfort-Its Edifices and Envi-[Correspondence of the Louisville Courier.]

FRANKFORT, September 1.

Edutors Louisei. Courier: When I wrote you ast, after the Inauguration Ball had subsided and Frankfort had subsided, I expected to imitate their excellent example and subside also; but finding this morning bright and redolent with balmy odors, I was wooed to the hills, and until now have been wandering around the valley wherein rests Frankfort, cosity embowered by elms and

The hours sped swiftly while musing and wandering, but time brought it shout that I was so unsentimental as to become conscious that the keen upper air had given me an appetite. Being cognizant, also, of the fact that the cars, like time and tide, wait for no man, I was forced to come down from my proud position and prepare for Journeying.

Glancing at the morning papers, I noticed that the Democrat had received information that there were five hundred ladies present at the Inauguration Ball. Now, I have heard of people seeing double, but this gentleman must have carried his imbibations to a fearful extent, for he saw more than endquine as there were less than one hundred. than quadruple, as there were less than one hundred and twenty-five ladies in the ball room .-

Tendering the papers to others who were eager to lesrn what had been said of their grand  $fet_{\epsilon}$ , and what kind of a reception Gov. Morehead had met with, I spent the remaining time at my dispo-sal is visiting the Capitol, the Arsenal, the Penitentiary, and the Cemeterv. These are all interesting to a stranger. The Capitol and minor edifices are situated in the midst of heautiful grounds, suggesting far more gentle thoughts than those connected with stormy debates and herce political contests. The Arsenal stands high up on a rocky ledge, saucily overlooking the town, as if conscious that it was the keeper of stores of murderous implements of war. The Penitentiary contains but little of interest, and hardly repays the trouble of a visit. Within its walls are now about two hundred and seventy-five convicts, of whom ten only are females. Their principal occupation is the manufacture of bag-As a relief to this dirty and unhealthy em loyment, they are allowed to exercise their ingenuity by constructing ornaments of bone, canne oal and pearl. Little cases of these are exposed for sale in every work room within the walls. The time occupied for this recreation is after a certain task is completed or after regular working hours. They were an unhealthy, villsinous looking set of scamps, hut seemed to be good natured and under the best of discipline.

The Cemetery stands high up on the hluff above the view overlocking the number of the research.

the river, overlooking the entire valley. It is reached both by a carriage path and a foot path. The latter winds along under the cliffs, gradually ascending by stone steps. It is shaded by forest trees, and through their interlscing branches you catch glimpses of green meadows and the winding river. There has been much taste dis played in laying out the Cemetery, and this, to-getter with its natural advantages, make it as beautiful a spot as any other in the United States. Its most important feature is the grave of Daniel Boone. Around his last resting place the feet of thousands of pilgrims have worn the turf entirely awar, leaving the mound fresh and green, as if the tender grass had become imperishable, like the fame of him whose mortality moulders beneath. The Military Monument comes next in importance. This was erected to commemorate the bravery of Kentucky's sons, who fell in fighting her carly hattles. It is a fine square shaft, sixty feet high, surmounted by marble semblances of can-non, ilags, &c. On its sides are inscribed the names of the various pattles, and in a circle surcounding its base, are the graves of the heroes who yielded their lives for their country's good. The onument of Richard M. Johnson stands quite mear the Military Monument. It is a column sur mounted by the American flag and an eagle. Of one side of its square side is the likeness of the old soldier, on another he is represented in the set of killing Tecumseh. Both of these monuments are objects of interest to visitors. They stand in the highest portion of the grounds, sur-counded by evergreens and native forest trees There are many other noteworthy points in the Cemetery, but these must be left undescribed at present, as my letter has grown to undue length, and the time draws near for my departure. I leave Frankfort with regret, as in my short so-journ I have formed several pleasant acquaintan-ces, and have become saturated with the dreamy quietness of its elm-shadowed streets. Au revoir BEPPO.

Who Will Move the Crops? A correspondent of the Terre Haute (Ind.) Ex-

New York Times writes:

I posted my last letter at Milan on the Soil ult, and since then have visited Placenzs, Mo-deua, Bologna and Pernaca. Just before leaving Milan, I saw at a cafe the famous Englishman who has rendered such signal service in Garibaldi's corps. He is about middle age, and dressed in bottle green, and possesses the most indifferent, passive physique imaginable. A young volwhile his master with his opera glass spies out Austrian epaulettes. One, two, three, four, live, six. The servant re-takes the revolver, the master applies his glass, and so on. Throughout the fight he is apparently indifferent to the enthusiasm he excites, and quite unaware that he is doing uncommon things. Volunteers from central Italy were fast arriving as we left. Many of them barefooted, without provisions and without nioney. A committee of Milanese was instantly formed, and large sums collected. They all intend to re enlist under Casso. It would, indeed, be shameful if Lomhardy left them to want, but this will not be the case. Nevertheless, the conduct of Lamaramora is universally blamed. It was not until after the armistice that Garibald or any of his officers received their brevet. Now, it is said, he is made general of division, and that his corps will be incorporated into the Piedmonteste army .- Cincinnati Gazette

CLIMAX. - All students of rhetoric are taught to ppreciate the advantages of the climacteric form of expression, by which one rises, from simple terms and objects of comparatively little interest to higher flights of imagination and things of superior importance. It is seldom that one meets with a finer example of the judicious use of the climax than in the following passage from one of the New York journals. Speaking of Mr. Cassidy, who is said to be reponsible for the publication of Wise's letter to Donnelly, the writer says:
"As a Christian and Catholic, he has degraded his religion, violated the honor of a gentleman, lost the confidence of the Christian hrotherhood, endangered the auccess of the Democracy of the

Vulcspite Base for Artificial Teeth has been thoroughly tested and used in Esstern cities for the last four years, and proved, beyond a doubt to be the hest and most substantial ever used as a Real Estate Agents, Fourth st., opp Masonic Temple. LOUISVILLE, March 16th, 1858. We, whose names are hereto attached, would respect fully state that Loniavile and vicinity, have heretofor-been entirely dependent upon river navigation for a supply of coal, the uncertainty of navigation, obstruct ed by ice a considerable part of the winter, and the low water in the summer, together with the heavy losses in-curred by sluking and wrecking of boats, has caused the price of Coat to rule high, which has been a serious drawback to our manufacturing interests, to overcome these difficulties we have necessarily to look to the toese difficulties we have decessarily to look to the coal fields of Indiana, the nearest of which, approximate to within 75 or 50 miles of the Falls of the Ohle river; the coal and from lands situated on both sides of the Ohle and Missiasippi Railroad, to Martin Gounty, cannot be considered otherwise than value be, especially those now offered for sale by Jas. Leavenworth Municipal Election. St. Lovis, September 6.—The Leavenworth municipal election passed off quietly. Denman, Democrat, is thought to be re-elected by a amail majority. The Republicans have gained largely over the last election, and will probably have a najority of city council officers.

Washington, September 6.—The New Orleans appers received by mail state that the Independents or Houston Democrate have a majority of 22 on joint ballot in the new Legislature recently

Young Men in the French Army .- A writer for the N. Y. Times, who saw the recent triumphal parade in Paris, says:

parade in Paris, says:

I was particularly impressed by the apparent youth of the men. The ranks seemed to be made up of youths between eighteen and twenty-five; and there was something intensely peculiar in the atern, calm, resolute air of these young men, sonburned, swarthy, and slamped with the special signet of war. The Emperor looked very much careworn, but bronzed and martial in hearing, and in heter apparent health han ever. The Zouaves and Turcos were an exception to the general seriousness of demeanor of the troops. There is something facinating as well as admirable in the carriage of the Zouaves, they look so lithe and carriage of the Zouaves, they look so lithe and gay-like not unantiable leopards, at once playful gay—like not unanianie leopards, at once playini and terrible. The Turcos are very barbaric, and their wild, barbaric music of clarions and tamtams added to this air in them. Many of them are lrue Ethiopians. A Southern friend at my side whispered to me that they would be 'an invalua ble corps at New Oorleans." I answered him, "Yes; they would make capital neld hands, but might require rather too much overseeing."

BEOWNLOW ON A DELICATE SUBJECT .- "Brown ow" has been visiting the Virginia Springs, and gets off the following, in a recent editorial letter to

After tea, I was led to enter the hall-room, from earing a superior female voice, as on accompanihearing a superior female voice, as on accompaniment to the band playing "Sweet Home." A perfect stranger, and a mere looker on, I quietly seated myself on a lounge. Soon the ladica and geutlemen came in, two and two, and never did the highlands of Scotlaud, the green hills of Switzerland, or the rural districts of Germany, exhibit such dancers! Their jewelled necks, and ears, and lingers, and dazzling brocades, each said to the other "none of your dresses cost like mine." The company in the ball-room was small, and rather select a few of us. rather select, a few of us, passengers, intruding. They commenced waltzing—hugging each other close—they flew round upon a polished floor. The hoops would ilr up—the skirts exhibited themselves—the ankles showed for themselves. I can't trust myself any farther on this subject!

THE SECRET HISTORY OF THE PEACE OF VILLA-FRANCA.—A London correspondent of the Journal de Frankfort, writes that immediately after the de Frankfort, writes that immediately after the battle of Solferino, Count de Persigny, the French Ambassador at the Court of St. James, had an interview with Lord Palmerston, and handed to him a telegraphic dispatch, dated from the head-quarters of the Emperor Napoleon, in Italy, and containing propositions of peace. It is useless to repeat the exact details of these propositions divided into seven heads; I content myself with mentioning that Austria was to abandon all her Italian possessions; that Lombardy was entirely to pass to Sardinia; and that Venice was to be erected into an Italian Duchy, with an Austrian Archted into an Italian Duchy, with an Austrian Archduke for sovereign, but with a government and an army purely Italian. Lord Palmerston and Lord John Russell were ready at once to express England's approval of these conditions, but the queen, more punctilious, called a Cabinet Counse What followed is not exactly known, but it is evident that the Emperor Napoleon could produce to the Emperor of Austria the telegraphic dispatch of Count Persigny, stating that the British Government had accepted propositions of peace infinitely more onerous for Austria than those which her enemy had offered her.

SCRIPTURAL EMENDATON.—The clerk of an Engish church, who had to read the first lesson in the public services, always used to make a hash of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego; and as the names are twelve times repeated in the third chapter of Daniel, after getting through with them the first time, he afterwards styled them the "aforesaid gentlemen."

Sold SO Maldeu Lane, N. Y. SORE THROAT PLAGUE AND SORE THROAT .- This quality of seizing hold and causing the expulsion of depraved amors, is possessed by no other medicine than BRAN-DRETE'S PILLS. They operate only upon the tissnes in volved in, that is affected by the disease. In fact, they selze upon those humors, and not so much from prefer ence as from natural affinity, because their life is below that of the surrounding parts, and which, settling on the tissues of the throat, that is, around the throat region, produces sore throat, sore throat plugue, and the severe headache and fever. Within an hour after four or six pills are taken there is felt a peculiar creeping in the part affected, a sort of collecting up of th disessed humors ready for expulsion. No hurt or reakening effect can ever arise from their use, because they cannot act upon healthy parts. Taken early they prevent all organic diseases. A complete Philosophical Apparatus for sale at a bar-aln. au24 dlm2w4 LYON'S MAGNETIC POWDERS, Will destroy Garden Insects, Cockroaches, Eed Bugs, Fleas Anis Moths, and all pests of the vermin kind.

The importance of a reliable article of this kind is inestinable. In warm weather all nature teems with there nnoying foes. This powder is the only article ever discovered which will exterminate them. A company operation of the control butanists, from the Horticuliural Society of Paris, while amidst the ferns of Asia, observed that all insects lighting upon a certain kind of plant very soon dropped dead. This fact was made use of to guard their night camps from these intruders. Quantities of the plant were brought home by Mr. E. Lyon, and found a positive insect destroyer in every experiment. It is simply a powdered leaf, chemically prepared to resist the effect of age and climate. Medsis and tetters Patent have been obtained from the Governments of England, France, Germany, and Russis, from the World's Fair, and numerous medical and horticultural colleges, and societies.

Letters from the President of the United States, EXECTIVE MANSION, WARRINGTON, Jan. 81, 1856.

"MR. FRANUEL LYON—Dear Sir: I have the pleasure to inform you that the Royal Commission of the World's Fair, at London, have awarded you a Medial and Cerl facte for the great value of your Magnetie powders, ior exterminating insects, etc.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1, 1855.

MR. E. LYOW—Dear Sir: We have analysed and tested your Magnetic Powders, and find them perfectly harmless to mankind and domestic animals, but certain death when inhaled by bugs, ants, and insects.

JAMES R. CHILTON, M. D., Chemist.

LAURANCE REID, Prof. Chemistry, N. Y. Hospital.

Mr. JOHN L. ROME, Superintendent of the New York Hospital, says, "he has expelled all the bugs, ants, roaches, moths, etc., with Lyon's Powder, and finds it of immense value."

Every gardener and honae-keeper must have a direct interest in an article of this kind. Reference can be made to the Astor, St. Nicholas, and Metropolitan Hotels; to Judge Meigs, President of the American Institute, James Gordon Benneti, Gen. Winfield Scotts, Cyrus W. Fleid, L. M. Pease, of the Five Points Milssion, etc., etc. Judge Meigs says, "This discovery of prof. Lyon is of national importance. The Farmers' Olub have testedit theroughly. It will destroy icousts, grasshoppers, ants, moths, bugs, and all vermin. Garden plants can be preserved, and housea made pure."

Arrangements are now made, through Messrs. Barnes: & Paak, of New York, to have it sold throughont the world. Many worthless imitations are advertised. Becantious!

New York Stock Market. New York, September 6.—The stock market was exceeding buoyent to-day, and, excepting the railroad boands, the entire list shows a higher on the western list did not sympathise with the general market was Michigan guaranteed, which pened at 26 sgainst 28 at yesterday's afternoon board, and sold down to 24, closing finally at 24 3-4 to 25; N. Y. Central went as high as 753 4, but closed at 781.8 to 781-4; Galena closed at 783-4 to 737 8; Rock Island at 093 4. Coal stocks trong and offered in small lote ouly at an advance of 1.2 to 3.4 per cent. In railroad bonds | B B Summers the transactions were all on a larger scale, but prices were generally easier. Ill. Central 7's full 1 per cent; Mo. 2a2; Pacific R. R. 7's with Mo. State generally brought 85. The transactions in State stocks were eminently large to day, especially in Mo. 6's, which sold to the extent of $135, 000 at 85 cash, and on sellers option.

The business in exchange for the America's mal has not been large, though rates are firm. Sterling has been comparatively quiet at 110@ 110%, the outside figure for small lots. The hulk of sales has been in frances at 5.12% net, at short sight. It is probable that our first supplies of Southern bills will be on Paris, as the French, as asual, are already purchasing considerable quantities of cotton at the Gulf posts. Meantime frances are held firm at full rates. The Etna, for Liverpool to-morrow, will take in specie about $50,000, probably a little more. The August receipts of the Mich. Southern road, show a falling off, compared with August, 1858, of $60,000. The Ill. Cent. road received in August $177,000 against $203,000 in August 1558. The receipts of grain at Chicago the first four days of September equal the quantity received the last week of August. The earnings of the Little Miami and Columbus and Nenia roads for Augus', 1859, are $119,740 33, which is an increase over August, 1858, of $6,207 12.

The weekly bank statement is favorably con strued; the increase in loans being accounted fo n part, by the fresh demand from the west, which in turn must work additional ease. The transac-tions in money, to-day, do not show any change in

From Washington. Washington, Sept. 6.—There is no truth in the recent statement from Vera Cruz that Minis-ter McLane had presented an ultimatum and demanded the immediate ratification of the treaty for it is known here that his preliminary points thereof were mutually satisfactory to both this Government and that of the Constitutionalists. It was also understood that if the treaty should It was also understood that it the treaty should be ratified on this basis, McLane himself would return it to Washington. The main points prob-ably are the right of way across the Northern States of Mexico from the Rio Grande to Maratian, and from Arozona to Guavenas, or some other outlet on the Gulf of California, the United States to have the privilege of transporting troops and munitions of war over those routes and to protect the latter in case of the mability of Mexico to do so. In consideration of these grants the United States are to pay $4,060,000, one half to be appropriated for the satisfaction of the claims of our citizens against Mexico.
